

Society for Earth-based Religions

BSU SER exists to:

1. Provide a non-threatening, supportive environment for practitioners of earth-based religions, pagans, and others of like mind to exchange ideas, practices, and beliefs.
2. Promote understanding, acceptance and tolerance of and between all spiritual paths.
3. Provide education for the Ball State University community concerning all matters regarding practitioners of earth-based religions, pagans, and those that hold similar spiritual beliefs.
4. Provide information about earth-based religion and pagan activities and events to members as well as the community in general.
5. Establish ties with other earth-based religious and friendly groups.
6. Find other students of like mind.
7. Provide support for individuals who are victims of religious intolerance.

BSU SER Bylaws

All members and attendees shall respect the right to anonymity of all members and attendees of events or meetings. No member or attendee shall divulge name or contact information of anyone affiliated with the group without express permission from that person. However, sharing of group information, such as official email address and meeting/event times/locations, is allowed and encouraged.

All members and attendees shall behave in a respectful, peaceful manner at all events and meetings. Speech and actions at meetings should never be used to willfully do harm to any individual or group, present or absent. Using SER to evangelize pagan or other views, religious or non, is inappropriate.

Any person accused of being in violation of these rules will be evaluated by the executive board members. The board will vote and, if tied, the decision will default to the faculty advisor. Anyone found to actually be in violation of these rules may be suspended or barred from further meetings at the decision of the Faculty Advisor and Executive Officers. Dues, if applicable, will not be refunded to such individuals.
